Vek Smekley

-A former archivist of the DeWonti Trade Consortium; initial appraisal of his abilities shows promise for recruitment, however his his strong self-preservation instinct may indicate against entrusting him with sensitive material of any kind.

-After locating the dead body of an acquaintance who had apparently been killed by the Consortium, he himself was targeted for execution, but managed to flee; he sought the aid of Keojrah-Glynt Company due to our existing rivalry/hostilities with DeWonti, in hopes that he could trade information for protection.

-Chemical interrogation and follow-up on his leads have corroborated his claims; though it is hypothetically possible that resisted these methods, and that our successful mission on the abandoned Fungal Farm was a ploy to gain our trust, I believe the existence of the Procuratia to stand in contradiction to this possibility, as I do not believe Lady von Tarquinius would have risked (or chosen to use) discovery of such valuable and heretical tools in such a scheme. Indeed, I believe it was the discovery of the Procuratia's existence that led Vek's acquaintance to be terminated, as he had apparently been investigating the disappearances of the women that I believe were to undergo the proxy procedure.

-Vek's information has further provided us with the ability to decrypt DeWonti transmissions, and possible access to the Starlight's Boon. Both assets must be used carefully, to avoid detection. The Cryptographic Cyphers have proven useful via the aid of Kelvin 111 and the Comutotitron Chapel.

-Vek has dispatched to the 508 as a defensive measure to the interests of the DeWonti Trade Consortium; he has been instructed to assist them with logistical administration, and to pass information back to KG-co when relevant.
